Monroe, Michigan's RALPH NAVEAUX

is recognized as a preeminent historian of the Battles of the River Raisin. Naveaux's book, Invaded on All Sides, is lauded as the definitive work on these conflicts.

When staff at River Raisin National Battlefield Park find themselves stumped by battle-related questions, “Call Ralph!” is their predictable response.

Once again, we have called Ralph - this time, to take the stage in the Park's Visitor Center Theatre. He will discuss the battles, his motivation to write about them, and his continuing exploration of the region's history. Audience members will be invited to comment and pose questions.

And just in time for the holidays, Ralph will be available to sign copies of his recently released second edition of Invaded on All Sides.

Ralph, in period attire, hefts a hatchet during a recent reenactment event.
